b6 -2

I spoke to you yesterday. I am [redacted] and I am [redacted]

Attached is the short piece for the FBI's review and approval. I am submitting this in an overabundance of caution. However, it is good to touch base and establish a relationship with the prepub section because I am a writer and may wade in with additional work later on. As I mentioned, I do not participate in social media and I remain off-line; so this piece will be anonymous. My friend who is an author and blogger asked me to do a guest piece for her blog.

I'm not sure what the title will be, and I am planning to provide a photo, so let me know if you need to see the photo too.

I told him that he should submit to RMD basically what he thought, after talking to the writer, what he would talk about. He is outside our groupwise now, so I told him that RMD could then do the required Pre-Publication review and that I would send them to RMD for him. Since it involves an actual case, these things are all a bit more difficult. He notes below what he would likely be talking about and about any concerns he could see about protected matters. He notes the matter has been in the public realm via many sources, but I told him that sometimes that is not dispositive! What should we do to proceed?

You've got a several questions here, and I think we can help with some of them.

- Unless your supervisor is directing that you attend this as an official duty then this is something that would qualify as outside employment that you would need to report. Remember the FD-331 has been rolled into EPAS now, so that's where you can report that. Also as it would be outside employment if it conflicts with your normal duty hour obligations then you'd need to take leave.
- For the Keynote address as this is a topic that is related to your official duties you'd need to submit that for pre-publication review. The individual you'd need to get in touch with is [redacted] who's the POC in RMD for the pre-pub program. You can reach out to him on FBI.net, or they also have a UNCLASS e-mail drop box you can submit things to them via: [redacted] should also be able to provide more details on any requirements of our non-disclosure agreements regarding answering unscripted questions in a public forum.
- On the issue of compensation, in double-checking the Ethics Pocketguide, it says that travel expenses are permissible for outside speaking engagements related to official duties, which I think this would qualify as (p.30). To my thinking that would cover the food and lodging parts. As for the $50 registration fee I'm not certain about that one, and you'd probably be best off getting a read from the ethics lawyers. It looks like

you've got the right people on your initial e-mail below, but if you don't hear back from them in a reasonable time, here's OIC's list of POCs, [REDACTED]

If there's anything else you need or we can help with, let us know.

I volunteered to serve on a panel (pending approvals) where I went to graduate school, [REDACTED] for a 20th anniversary of the intelligence studies program there, and its biannual alumni intelligence conference.

I've been asked to serve as an alumni panelist on [REDACTED]

b6 -2

[REDACTED] I've also been asked to give the keynote address prior to the Law Enforcement panel.

- The conference is goes from check in on [REDACTED] I would be speaking on two out of the three days. They waive the $50 dollar conference fee/room/board (inclusive) for all panelists.

A couple questions:

- Would this necessitate a FD331?
- Is the fee waiver permissible given the Food/Board inclusion.
- Is this considered an official duty-type briefing given the topics? Do I need up to AD approval for that? If not would I be required to take leave to avoid that?
- For the Keynote is there a pre-pub I would have to go through?

My alma mater [redacted] is thinking about publishing an article about my college career for [redacted] webpage and/or alumni newsletter. Because of my internship and new job, the FBI is mentioned. I know there are rules about contact with the media and was wondering to whom I should speak for permission to do this. I have attached the draft in case that is relevant. I apologize if this is not within your job description and thank you for any assistance you can provide.

Sincerely,

Attached is a draft of an article I would like to submit to a LE publication such as LawOfficer or Police Marksman magazine.

Could you please let me know if pre-publication review is required. If so, what is the process for edits after initial submission? I wrote an article which was published in the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin and there were a couple of iterations of minor edits mostly for style without any substantive changes to the content or meaning. Does each revision have to go back to your office for review?

Good morning [REDACTED]

Attached is my article that we discussed on the phone yesterday. As we discussed it is based upon a criminal case that I worked in 2011. This case is now closed.

I have changed the names in the article (subject name, bank names, investment company names) and I made up the names that appear in the article.

The subject's true name is [REDACTED] The case was a 290 case from [REDACTED] but I do not have the file number.

b6 -1

The content of this article is completed. The only addition that may be required would be the footnoting of where information was obtained. It all came from public record sources such as Wikipedia and court records.

We intend to submit this article for publication consideration to periodicals such as the Journal of Accountancy and the Fraud magazine.

My contact information is as follows:

Thank you for your assistance. Hope you enjoy the article, but I know it contains a lot of dry accounting details.

Attached should be the last draft write-up for your review. Once this is incorporated into the bigger dissertation and I write the cross-case analysis/conclusions sections, I will submit the full document for RMD review. Again, thank you for taking the time to review these case write-ups. It is greatly appreciated.
